1 (In open court)

2 (Case called)

3 MR. BELL: Martin Bell for the government. With me,
4 with the Court's permission is, Colin Ross a summer intern from 5 our office.

6 THE COURT: I gladly grant permission.

7 How are you, Mr. Ross.

8 MR. ROSS: Good. Thank you, your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Is Mr. Bell showing you a good time?

10 MR. ROSS: Very much so, your Honor.

11 MR. LEDERMAN: Good morning, your Honor. George
12 Lederman, for defendant Eric Prokopi.

13 THE COURT: Good morning, Mr. Lederman, and good
14 morning, Mr. Prokopi.

15 THE DEFENDANT: Good morning.

16 THE COURT: Everyone can be seated.

17 Mr. Prokopi, have you had an opportunity to read the 18 presentence investigative report?

19 THE DEFENDANT: Yes, sir.

20 THE COURT: Mr. Lederman, are there any factual
21 objections to be presented to me?

22 MR. LEDERMAN: No, your Honor.

23 THE COURT: Does the government have any?

24 MR. BELL: No, your Honor.

25 THE COURT: I notice in the presentence investigative

E63npros

1 report, an addendum submitted to me on May 27, there is a
2 number of objections.

3 Have they been ironed out, Mr. Lederman?

4 MR. LEDERMAN: Yes, your Honor, they have.

5 THE COURT: So there's been a subsequent PSR?

6 MR. LEDERMAN: No, I think they are incorporated in 7 the PSR itself and the addendum is for this Court's review, but
8 there's nothing that's been done subsequent to the submission
9 of the addendum.

10 MR. BELL: Your Honor, I believe that the responses
11 laid out on pages 21 and 22 concerning the defendant's
12 objections as incorporated are sufficient. To the extent that
13 those indicate ongoing differences of opinion on any topic, I
14 am happy to address those. I am not certain.

15 THE COURT: I would like you to address them. Because 16 they go to the extent of culpability of Mr. Prokopi.

17 MR. BELL: Sure.

18 THE COURT: Mr. Prokopi suggests that he is an 19 innocent with regard to the provenance of the dinosaurs.

20 MR. BELL: I believe, your Honor --

21 THE COURT: His fault was a few misstatements in the 22 customs declarations, but that he didn't have an idea that the 23 dinosaurs came out of Mongolia in violation of the laws of 24 Mongolia.

25 MR. BELL: Your Honor, I actually think that

E63npros

1 Mr. Prokopi's current position doesn't go quite that far. On
2 page 21, where it references paragraph 10, Mr. Prokopi's
3 counsel does indicate that he knew that he transported fossils
4 that were taken from Mongolia in a manner contrary to law.

5 THE COURT: What does that mean?

6 MR. BELL: That means that it was essentially illegal
7 for them to leave Mongolia without the Mongolian government's 8 permission.

9 THE COURT: The point is not technical, Mr. Bell. My 10 concern has to do with the extent to which there is acceptance
11 of responsibility. Someone who is fudging what happened in my 12 mind doesn't have a clear sense of his own responsibility for 13 his crimes.

14 MR. BELL: I understand that, your Honor.

15 THE COURT: That bothers me.

16 MR. BELL: What I say, your Honor --

17 THE COURT: It bothers me also -- so Mr. Lederman
18 knows this -- that Mr. Prokopi refused to say anything when he 19 was interviewed by the probation department, and he says he's 20 resting on his plea. But the plea allocution is as bare bones
21 as I've seen. I didn't take this for whatever reason, I don't 22 remember, I guess I was otherwise engaged at the time, but I
23 would never have allowed a defendant to plead in that context
24 without eliciting a great many more contextual facts. So his 25 bare-bones allocution is sufficient to sustain the plea, but

E63npros

1 not more. And the way he has objected to the statements to the 2 probation officer lead me to have reservations whether or not
3 he clearly accepted responsibility.

4 MR. BELL: Your Honor, from the government's
5 standpoint I would say a couple of things. The first thing
6 that I would note is, to the extent there is a difference
7 between Mr. Prokopi's recognition that the dinosaurs were in 8 fact stolen and Mr. Prokopi's recognition, I guess in another
9 scenario, that the dinosaurs were taken from Mongolia in a
10 fashion contrary to law, the government does not have any 11 reason to believe that the former is more true than the latter
12 based on the case that it was able to develop.

13 So, to the extent that the reality is that Mr. Prokopi
14 just realizes that he shouldn't have taken them out of Mongolia
15 as opposed that being deeply rooted in Mongolia's patrimony
16 laws that were passed in 1924, there's not very much more that 17 we can add here. I would imagine this only pertains to the one
18 count involving the transportation of property, either stolen
19 or converted.

20 THE COURT: Of course, that's the major one.

21 MR. BELL: With respect to the conversion, your Honor,
22 what I would submit is that, to the extent that they were taken
23 out contrary to Mongolia's strict laws concerning natural 24 resources, they satisfied the conversion prong in any event.
25 But I understand your Honor's concern more to be just about

E63npros

1 does this actually get to the hilt of the defendant's knowing
2 conduct. The government does not have reason to believe that
3 there is necessarily more, that there is more within the case
4 that we developed that suggests that Mr. Prokopi was explicitly
5 aware of the Mongolian laws that rather than simply not giving
6 people permission to remove dinosaurs out of the country
7 actually render all of the natural things under the grounds the 8 property of Mongolia, if that makes sense, your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Look, that is all you need to convict, but 10 what I understand is the fact of the matter is that these 11 become available on the so-called open market because they are 12 stolen merchandise. They are not purchased through dealers.
13 The device is not a taking from someone else after paying the 14 value at some kind of an open auction. These goods, generally
15 speaking, are stolen and so on the black market they get out
16 from the country and people make money on the basis of this.
17 That's the device. That's what our laws are trying to protect 18 against.

19 MR. BELL: It is, your Honor, although we, and we 20 noted this a number of times before Judge Castel in the 21 parallel civil action as well. As black market enterprises go,
22 this one is a little unusual and not simply because it involves 23 Tyrannosaurus bones. It is a little unusual because for the 24 most part it is a black market that has thrived in plain sight,
25 owing among other things to lack of enforcement. And I think

E63npros

1 the government's only recently realizing the contours of that
2 black market and what it is. So, unlike other stolen property,
3 where you have your standard sort of earmarks of such thing, a
4 high level of secrecy and the like, these items, stolen though
5 they may be, are frequently sold at large fairs, the existence
6 of which people are aware.

7 THE COURT: Everyone averts his eyes.

8 MR. BELL: I think there's something to that. I think
9 there is something to that. I think that's right. There is a 10 combination of people who understand what the laws are or at 11 the very least that the permissions probably haven't been 12 granted, because the fact remains that Mongolia hasn't 13 allowed -- has enforced these laws and hasn't allowed dinosaur
14 fossils out of the country. I think there are also people who 15 enter the fairs with a less nuanced sense of the laws, but some 16 sense that, OK, if there were ever were to be scrutiny, perhaps 17 this is a business that we shouldn't be involved in, but that 18 scrutiny hasn't existed for sometime. I offer all of this,
19 your Honor, not by way of argument one way or other, but just 20 by way of background. I don't know if Mr. Lederman has 21 anything to add to that.

22 MR. LEDERMAN: If I may, your Honor?

23 THE COURT: Yes.

24 MR. LEDERMAN: Addressing the issue, your Honor, of my 25 client's acceptance, I think it is very fact specific here as

E63npros

1 to what my client did know. I was going to make this point in
2 my statement, but I would like to make it now as well, is that 3 my client operated under the assumption that, as long as the 4 permits were given to individuals, that they could legally
5 export these artifacts under Mongolian law. In fact, where my 6 client went awry is that in this specific case as to the 7 Tyrannosaurus bataar, upon learning when it was in transit that 8 the permits were not in place, that he then facilitated,
9 notwithstanding that, their entry into the United States by 10 means of making false statements.

11 So he did have that recognition at the time once they 12 left that nation. But, given the fact that, for example, as 13 recently as 2009 a foreign tourist could go into the gift shop
14 of the national museum store and buy dinosaur fossils, it led 15 to an understanding, perhaps not clear, as to what the law was,
16 and therefore the confusion that led to the export illicitly of 17 these artifacts.

18 THE COURT: I have to feel, Mr. Lederman, that if 19 Mr. Prokopi lied on the customs declaration form, he lied to 20 cover up something, some uncomfortable knowledge, and that
21 uncomfortable knowledge was that he was importing something
22 against the law. The falsity of the declarations seems to 23 confirm that perspective.

24 MR. LEDERMAN: We do not contest that, Judge.

25 THE COURT: You seem to even today.

E63npros

1 MR. LEDERMAN: I want to be clear about that.

2 THE COURT: You seem to.

3 MR. LEDERMAN: If that is what I am trying to say, I
4 don't mean to, because he fully understood that once they were 5 exported they were exported in a manner contrary to that 6 nation's laws. But the context, again, as Mr. Bell has 7 explained, is that this was very unclear, but upon learning
8 that he did not have the permission that had been issued in the 9 past, that it was at that point that he committed the crime.
10 He accepts that.

11 THE COURT: I have trouble following that. No one in 12 this business takes things or buys things without looking at 13 the provenance of an item. You are not buying a fake in a
14 store. You are not buying a copy of a piece of art. You are 15 buying something because of its quality as a fossil.

16 MR. LEDERMAN: I understand.

17 THE COURT: Your client was an expert at that. So
18 much so that he had the ability to create an exact replica of a
19 dinosaur from these fossils, and he did to great value. Given 20 the cost, given the selling price, and given the time he put 21 into it, he was earning something like a thousand dollars an 22 hour. I bet you don't earn that.

23 Your Honor, also if I just may respond briefly to his 24 not making a statement in the PSR, my client met for hours with 25 Mr. Bell and Homeland Security and gave a host of information

E63npros

1 that I think Mr. Bell will speak to.

2 THE COURT: I understand that. That is going to be
3 the subject of a motion under Section 5K2 --

4 MR. LEDERMAN: Yes. I thought in light of that that 5 it would be best to rest on what Mr. Bell would write in the 6 5K.

7 THE COURT: I think we have exhausted that point. You
8 know my feeling, Mr. Lederman.

9 MR. BELL: Your Honor, you mentioned a point of 10 distinction, and again this is just context, but the 11 circumstances are sufficiently unusual that I think the context
12 is important here.

13 A brief narrative may be helpful. My understanding is 14 that the dinosaur fossils at issue here, and there were a lot
15 of them, were originally taken from the ground in an operation
16 led by a single Mongolian.

17 THE COURT: In the Gobi Desert.

18 MR. BELL: In the Gobi Desert, that's correct,
19 specifically near what is called the Nemegt Basin. It is an 20 unusually fossil-rich region of Mongolia. Frankly, it would
21 appear -- I have learned a lot over the case your, Honor --
22 unique in the world. That individual -- who actually died as I
23 understand it before our investigation really got going -- that 24 individual was undoubtedly aware of Mongolia's laws regarding 25 natural resources, government property.

E63npros

1                   Mr. Prokopi and another individual reached out to, or 2 made contact with this individual and bought a large number of 3 fossils for, I think it was a combined $200,000. They visited
4 Mongolia, they saw the merchandise, and they had this
5 merchandise shipped over in multiple shipments to Great
6 Britain, which was where Mr. Prokopi's business partner
7 resided. He is sort of a fossil collector as well.

8                   As I understand it from our debriefings of 9 Mr. Prokopi, it was at that point, while they were divvying up
10 these fossils, that the realization was made that the fossils
11 were sent without the necessary permits. Whether that 12 understanding necessarily entails an understanding of 13 Mongolia's sort of patrimony laws is its own issue, but at that 14 point the defendant undoubtedly realized that they should not 15 have been taken out of Mongolia. At that point, however, he 16 proceeded to send them in multiple shipments to the United 17 States using labels that were at best misleading and in some 18 cases outright inaccurate.

19                   But with respect to Mr. Lederman's point that there is 20 a different sort of point of realization that happens, once you
21 realize that you haven't gotten the permits, as opposed to from 22 the Mongolian national's standpoint, where you know right from 23 the outset that these are not only things that require permits
24 but are in fact stolen, I can understand the distinction that 25 Mr. Lederman is trying to draw.

E63npros

1           THE COURT: OK.

2           I find the facts set out in the presentence
3 investigative report. The analysis of the sentencing
4 guidelines is as follows, the offense level under Section 2B1.5
5 as a base level of 8. There is an addition of another eight
6 points because the value is $70,000 to $120,000 as calculated
7 here. But I don't understand why it is at that level. It
8 would seem to be to be a higher level.

9           Another two levels are added under Section 2B1.5(b)
10 because the offense involved a current cultural heritage
11 resource or paleontological resource in that one of the 12 subparagraphs or more of the subparagraphs of Section
13 2B1.5(b) (2) are invoked.

14           Another two levels are added because the illegality
15 was for pecuniary gain, and another two levels are added
16 because there was a pattern of misconduct involving cultural 17 heritage resources or paleontological sources. The gross
18 addition comes up to 22 points. Three levels are suggested to 19 be reduced for acceptance of responsibility, yielding a net
20 offense behavior level of 19, which equates, because there are 21 no criminal history points to, a range of custodial punishment
22 of 30 to 37 months, and followed by supervised release of one
23 to three years on Count One, up to one year on Count Two, up to 24 one year on Count Three. So, putting it all together, one to 25 three years.

E63npros

1           Do I have it right, Mr. Bell?

2           MR. BELL: Two small things, your Honor.

3           One, with respect to paragraph 45, I just want to make
4 sure that the right guidelines provision was cited there. It's 5 2B1.5(b)(3)(F). I think that your Honor had mentioned two. It
6 is as it is spelled out in the PSR.

7           THE COURT: It doesn't make any difference.

8           MR. BELL: Right.

9           THE COURT: I take your point, and I agree with you.

10          MR. BELL: To the extent, your Honor, that you
11 mentioned some misgiving with respect to the dollar amount, I
12 didn't know whether you wanted us to be heard or that was just 13 for record purposes.

14          THE COURT: Well, the distinction between what I am
15 saying and you are saying is the value added by the work done
16 by Mr. Prokopi.

17          MR. BELL: That's correct, your Honor.

18          THE COURT: But I don't think it makes a difference,
19 so I will go by what you say.

20          MR. BELL: Thank you, your Honor.

21          THE COURT: Any objection or comment, Mr. Lederman.

22          MR. LEDERMAN: No, your Honor.

23          THE COURT: I find the guidelines as I read them out.

24          There is a motion to be made now by Mr. Bell.

25          MR. BELL: There is, your Honor. The government moves

E63npros

1 pursuant to Section 5K1.1 of the guidelines for a downward
2 departure in recognition and consideration for Mr. Prokopi's
3 substantial assistance to the government. I have outlined to 4 some degree that assistance in the submission, but if I could 5 be heard on it very briefly.

6 THE COURT: Yes. Go ahead please.

7 MR. BELL: Thank you. This, as I mentioned a moment
8 ago, is an unusual case. And Mr. Prokopi's offense here is an 9 unusual offense. But ultimately, this having happened, has 10 proven to be something of a net gain for the overall cause of 11 law enforcement because of two things. I will speak to them
12 both.

13 One of them is the recovery of the dinosaur fossils
14 that Mr. Prokopi ultimately facilitated. The other is what 15 federal law enforcement generally has gotten to understand
16 concerning this particular black market, one that was 17 sufficiently ignored for a time, that it was, as I mentioned
18 before, essentially able to hide in plain sight.

19 First, with respect to the dinosaurs recovered, we 20 went into the case -- we the, government -- essentially
21 pursuing information concerning one Tyrannosaurus bataar
22 skeleton, a bataar skeleton that had gone on auction here in 23 Manhattan in 2012 where the Mongolian government sought
24 assistance in recovering what was very clearly a Mongolian
25 dinosaur and one that they hadn't given permission to leave the

E63npros

1 country.

2 THE COURT: One they had not given permission?

3 MR. BELL: Correct, they had not.

4 In speaking with Mr. Prokopi once he began to 5 communicate with the government, once he sat down with us, and 6 began to cooperate.

7 THE COURT: One minute.

8 MR. BELL: Sure.

9 THE COURT: Go ahead.

10 MR. BELL: Thank you, your Honor.

11 In speaking with Mr. Prokopi, we were alerted to the 12 existence of other fossils, also Mongolian government property,
13 of which we hadn't been aware. These included other dinosaur
14 fossils in Mr. Prokopi's possession, at least in his 15 constructive possession, and in the immediate possession of 16 contacts of his that we were also able to recover.

17 They included a second Tyrannosaurus skeleton, I
18 dinosaur called an Oviraptor, which is an egg-eating thing. I
19 think a number of them stampeded in the 1996 movie "Jurassic
20 Park." It might have been 1992. I was young and awestruck in 21 any event, your Honor.

22 THE COURT: I missed the movie. Maybe I should go
23 back to see it.

24 MR. BELL: Every now and then it airs on TNT. I will
25 stop what I am doing, particularly now, your Honor.

E63npros

1           There were several other dinosaur fossils that we were
2 able to immediately recover. In addition to that, there were 3 two fossils that were at least in the legal possession of an 4 auction gallery in California that had had dealings with 5 Mr. Prokopi. They included -- I want to make sure I have this
6 right -- what is called an Oviraptor matrix. Let me explain
7 what that is. That is a rock structure in which the bodies of 8 about five Oviraptor dinosaurs were embedded.

9           Your Honor, I don't know how familiar you are with 10 Rodan, who was well known for the Burghers of Calais, a number
11 of scenes of torture of medieval figures, and they are all sort
12 of huddled together. This piece was the dinosaur equivalent of 13 those. There was also another plant-eating dinosaur --

14           THE COURT: How so?

15           MR. BELL: In that a number of them were sort of 16 positioned within the rocks essentially at the moment of their 17 demise.

18           THE COURT: Oh.

19           MR. BELL: It is in that sense.

20           THE COURT: As if they were huddling?

21           MR. BELL: As if they were huddling, or at least as if 22 they met the same demise by lava flow or what have you.

23           These were pieces that we were also able to recover.
24 In addition to that, Mr. Prokopi's information confirmed what 25 we heard from another individual, Mr. Prokopi's former business

E63npros

1 partner, who came forward during this investigation,
2 essentially giving us the same story and offering to enter into
3 an agreement by which, he even though he hadn't violated
4 American laws and was not subject to our jurisdiction, might go
5 about returning the dinosaurs so that they, too, might be 6 returned to Mongolia.

7 THE COURT: I suppose he had the same problem with 8 English law as Mr. Prokopi has with our law?

9 MR. BELL: My understanding is that he was subject to 10 some scrutiny as a result of that. I don't think that the 11 investigation came to any real fruition. I suspect that the 12 English authorities were ultimately satisfied once the news
13 came that the dinosaur fossils in his case were returned.

14 But, all told, your Honor, between the original two 15 Tyrannosaurus, a third one that we got from Mr. Moore, a 16 number of other dinosaurs -- when I was a kid, my favorite was 17 the Ankylosaurus, which had sort of a back of armor and a long
18 knobby tail that was built like a tank. We've got one of 19 throws, and we are returning that to Mongolia.

20 Over 18 largely complete, if not fully prepped,
21 dinosaur fossils will be returned as a result indirectly or
22 directly of Mr. Prokopi's information to Mongolia, a country
23 which is not only enthusiastic about the possibility of 24 dinosaur tourism based solely on the haul from this case, but 25 which badly seems to need it. That just gives you a sense of

E63npros

1 the actual things that were able to be repatriated. The 2 initial bazaar, the first bazaar, the one that was up for
3 auction, was returned to the grateful people of Mongolia in a
4 repatriation ceremony last year.

5 The other will be returned later on this summer at a
6 ceremony that we intend to make the Court and the Court
7 community as a whole aware of because we will have a couple of 8 display places out. Frankly, it will just be interesting.

9 That touches on category one.

10 With respect to category two, Mr. Prokopi's case has 11 been part of what you might call something of a law enforcement
12 renaissance when it comes to this particular field of dealing
13 in stolen fossils. It is fair to say the following, and I
14 can't get in great detail here because a number of these 15 investigations are still pending, there are investigations in 16 the District of Wyoming, in the District of California, and 17 potentially in other places, the Eastern District of New York,
18 that are looking into the provenance and possible illegal
19 importation of other dinosaur fossils.

20 I should be clear these are not cases that directly 21 implicate Mr. Prokopi in any criminal culpability, but they are 22 cases in which the knowledge that he's given us of this 23 community, which you can imagine is fairly small, has been 24 helpful. I think it's fair to say, as I noted in my submission
25 earlier, that there is probably not an active fossil

E63npros

1 investigation at this point that doesn't owe on some level to
2 information that Mr. Prokopi has furnished law enforcement
3 with, at least indirectly.

4 So I wanted to give you a sense of those two broad
5 types of cooperation and benefit that the government has been
6 able to recover both between what we have been able to return
7 to Mongolia and frankly getting federal law enforcement's act
8 together with respect to the policing of this admittedly
9 obscure area.

10 Mr. Prokopi has come to meetings when we've wanted.
11 He has, so far as we've been able to tell, been candid and 12 truthful. And he's delivered, an actual dinosaur museum being 13 built in Ulan Bator, Mongolia, can speak to that.

14 For that reason, your Honor, the government moves for 15 a downward departure for Mr. Prokopi pursuant to Section 5K1.1.
16 The crime is a serious one, and we recognize that. These are 17 natural resources that literally cannot be duplicated. You
18 would need, frankly, the sort of power that the movie "Jurassic 19 Park" suggested, but which doesn't exist in reality. We 20 recognize that the crime was serious for that reason.

21 But Mr. Prokopi's cooperation has been useful, has 22 been fruitful, has been important. For these reasons, your 23 Honor, we believe a downward departure is appropriate.

24 THE COURT: The motion is granted. It remains for me
25 to decide how it impacts on the sentence.

E63npros

1           For that purpose, I will hear Mr. Lederman.

2           MR. LEDERMAN: Thank you, your Honor.

3           Only moment before Mr. Prokopi was presented to 4           Magistrate Pitman on October 22, 2012, Mr. Bell, with whom I
5           have had a good working relationship during these last 18
6           months, asked if I would step inside the witness room outside 7           the magistrate's court for a minute.

8           And in our brief talk, Mr. Bell -- and I'll try not to 9           misstate him -- said to me that if my client were to provide 10          information regarding this second Tyrannosaurus bataar to which 11          Mr. Bell has alluded, that that information alone, that 12          specific information would go a long way in furtherance of any 13          assistance he might subsequently render.

14          Within a short time after that, Mr. Prokopi not only
15          provided the government with that information, but as Mr. Bell 16          has already said, he provided them with the knowledge of the 17          existence and the whereabouts of a fossils about which they 18          were not even aware. He was instrumental in recovering those 19          fossils from others who had possession of them, eventually 20          surrendering them in a peaceful way to Homeland Security
21          officers.

22          I am not going to go into the other aspect of the 23          cooperation. Obviously, Mr. Bell has set it forth eloquently
24          in his 5K. But I do not think it would be too much to say that 25          his cooperation was not just substantial but extraordinary.

E63npros

1           As we can tell from the members of the press in court
2 this morning, this case has garnered widespread international
3 media appeal. In that regard, I would just like to briefly
4 attempt to dispel a couple of misconceptions about Mr. Prokopi
5 to the extent that it may impact on sentencing by this Court.

6           First, the notion that my client is some sophisticated
7 ringleader of an intricate black market smuggling network who 8 himself has dug up bones in the Gobi in the dark of night makes 9 for good press, but just happens not to be true. My client is 10 a simple man who has spent most of his life, his entire life in 11 Florida with his then ex-wife and two young children. He 12 turned what was a child's love and passion of dinosaurs into a
13 craft and a business.

14           The letters I have submitted in my brief to this Court
15 attest to somebody who has shared his passion not only with his 16 family, but with members of his community, especially its 17 youth. It was never just about the money. He never had any 18 expensive boats, expensive cars, expensive planes, jewelry,
19 jewels, watches, never took expensive trips. The little money
20 he did make, and it was a little only, he then would reinvest
21 into subsequent fossil projects because of the love of his 22 craft. He was able to support his family only in a very modest
23 way. They are in court here, his parents and even his ex-wife
24 in support.

25           The second thing I would like to try to dispel,

E63npros

1 although we have already addressed it, is the context in which
2 his crimes, for which he does accept completely, occurred.

3 There has been some confusion about the law abroad, in 4 Mongolia, and to what extent he understood that.

5 But what is clear and for which he makes, excuse the 6 pun, no bones about it, is that once these items left that 7 nation without the permits that he thought one could obtain and 8 had been obtained in the past, that he nevertheless facilitated
9 their entry into the U.S. by means of false statements.

10 THE COURT: Why did he make the false statements?

11 MR. LEDERMAN: Because I think at that point he was 12 committed, and he has committed an offense.

13 THE COURT: What was the nature of the falsehood?

14 MR. LEDERMAN: For example, some of the statements
15 listed that the country of origin is Britain when in fact
16 that's not true. That was a means to facilitate their entry
17 into the U.S. Or to characterize the dinosaur fossil as a 18 reptile, that also, while not untrue, is misleading, and he 19 accepts that.

20 THE COURT: So if he believed that the permits existed
21 to get stuff out of the country --

22 MR. LEDERMAN: Yes, sir.

23 THE COURT: -- he wouldn't be saying these things.

24 MR. LEDERMAN: Yes. That's right, your Honor. That's 25 absolutely right. But that was at the time once they left.

E63npros

1                   THE COURT: That's the only time you measure it, is at 2 the time. If he believed that they came from the United
3 Kingdom, he shouldn't have pleaded guilty. So he clearly
4 didn't believe that. He didn't believe that. He believed they 5 came out of Mongolia.

6                   MR. BELL: I think I sense just a disconnect.

7                   THE COURT: Mr. Bell. Let me, please.

8                   MR. BELL: Sure.

9                   THE COURT: We are going back to the same point. You
10 are an advocate, Mr. Lederman. It is not your business to 11 expand the culpability of your client. It is often your 12 business to diminish it.

13                  But at this point one of the most important criteria 14 that affects me in sentencing is the extent to which the 15 defendant understands what he did and the extent of his
16 culpability, because without that understanding there is no
17 chance of a change of behavior. That is important to me in 18 sentencing.

19                  So when you try to parse the words too carefully, I 20 get the feeling that your client still hasn't fessed up to what 21 he did.

22                  MR. LEDERMAN: I think, your Honor, if I may, I think
23 I have tried to be as precise and not parse.

24                  THE COURT: Maybe candor is a little more useful.

25                  MR. LEDERMAN: I think that my client will speak to

E63npros

1 that as well. If I may proceed?

2 THE COURT: You are his lawyer. I'm listening
3 carefully to what you say.

4 MR. LEDERMAN: OK.

5 THE COURT: Mr. Bell, did you want to say something?

6 MR. BELL: I did, your Honor.

7 It doesn't seem to me as though Mr. Prokopi through 8 Mr. Lederman is disputing that the shipment was made.

9 THE COURT: I will form my own opinions on that.

10 MR. BELL: Yes, your Honor.

11 MR. LEDERMAN: Your Honor, I have tried to be candid
12 and I hope I have been, and I know my client will be as well,
13 but he has a brief opportunity to speak.

14 I did want to say that, as this Court is going to 15 sentence Mr. Prokopi, this Court should be aware of the degree
16 to which he has already been punished indirectly by this case
17 since his arrest and indirectly because of his arrest in this 18 case. He has lost a wife to divorce, who nevertheless is in 19 court here, ex-wife, in support. He has lost a home to 20 effective foreclosure. He has lost a business to fear, whether 21 actual or perceived, by others who no longer will work with him
22 for fear that they will suffer reprisals by the government.

23 Because of the media frenzy that has surrounded this 24 matter he has suffered a level of public indignity, shame and 25 humiliation that few private individual defendants are ever

E63npros

1 forced to endure. He will bear that for the rest of his life.

2 Notwithstanding that, he has done his best to keep his
3 feet on the ground, to support his children, even though he is
4 effectively bankrupt. The probation department has recommended
5 a sentence of 30 months.

6 THE COURT: The probation department on all cases that
7 I have does not take into consideration the 5K1 letter.

8 MR. LEDERMAN: Yes.

9 THE COURT: I have asked them not to because I think
10 that is my responsibility, not theirs.

11 MR. LEDERMAN: Yes, your Honor. But the report also 12 does not take into account the case law I have cited in my 13 brief, which speaks to similarly situated defendants who have 14 committed similar offenses and who have not rendered assistance
15 and yet who have received a sentence that does not include
16 incarceration.

17 THE COURT: It is very difficult to compare one
18 defendant to another.

19 It is important, of course, not to discriminate among 20 similarly situated defendants and to try to treat them as 21 similarly as possible, but judges differ and the contexts of 22 crimes differ. So there is a blend of individualized treatment
23 and an attempt to have some kind of evenness among defendants.
24 I don't know what the others did. I don't know how they did
25 it. I know what the sentencing guidelines are, which are a

E63npros

1 strong effort to create an equality of treatment, and I know
2 that I've got to take into consideration the substantial
3 cooperation that Mr. Bell told me about. Just how I do it is 4 yet something I have to come to.

5 In that context I'm listening to what you say very
6 carefully. I read what you said about others. I am affected,
7 but it is not determinative. What is more important to me is 8 to size up Mr. Prokopi and how he feels about what he did and 9 what are the chances of a rehabilitated life.

10 MR. LEDERMAN: I think, your Honor, that in answering
11 that, which my client will do as well, more specifically, I
12 think he is deeply pained by the harm he has caused, and he
13 wants nothing more than an opportunity to repair whatever
14 damage has occurred in the paleontological field.

15 It is borne, again, of a compassion and a love of the 16 trade, not of money, not of individual gain. For the reasons
17 set forth by Mr. Bell, and in my memo, I do think that a
18 sentence of probation would be a reasonable exercise of this 19 Court's discretion.

20 Thank you.

21 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Lederman. Mr. Prokopi, you
22 have the right to address me, but it is not an obligation. It
23 is up to you.

24 THE DEFENDANT: I would like to apologize to this 25 Court and the government for my actions. What I did was wrong,

E63npros

1 and I failed to appreciate the gravity of what I had done. My
2 life has been devastated by these mistakes, but I have not lost
3 my love for paleontology and hope to rebuild my business with 4 more emphasis on proper documentation.

5 THE COURT: Say that again. You have lost your?

6 THE DEFENDANT: I have not lost my love for 7 paleontology.

8 THE COURT: You have not lost it? You still love it?

9 THE DEFENDANT: Yes.

10 THE COURT: The rest of the sentence, please.

11 THE DEFENDANT: And I hope to rebuild my business with 12 more emphasis on proper documentation for everything.

13 I sincerely love fossils, and I was and never will be 14 in it just for the money. I am remorseful for the damage my 15 actions may have caused to hurt the relationship between 16 commercial and academic paleontology.

17 THE COURT: What damage do you think was caused?

18 THE DEFENDANT: Just the negative publicity to 19 commercial paleontology. It is not understood. It is hard to 20 explain.

21 THE COURT: Why is it hard to explain? Commercial
22 paleontology is the sale of fossils for profit.

23 THE DEFENDANT: Right.

24 THE COURT: Academic is for the purpose of studying
25 fossils. To the extent that there is a successful commercial

E63npros

1 market, the academic study is furthered and popularized, so
2 there needn't be a conflict.

3 THE DEFENDANT: Right. It is my hope --

4 THE COURT: I think sourcing in an illegal manner may 5 hurt both.

6 THE DEFENDANT: That's what I am saying. I hope I can
7 repair that, especially what hurt I've caused to the commercial
8 reputation of the commercial field in general. I have never 9 and will never condone destruction of specimens merely for 10 profit. It saddens me that I have been portrayed as a smuggler
11 getting rich from the destruction of important fossil
12 specimens, and nothing could be further from the truth.

13 THE COURT: You were not accused of destroying 14 anything.

15 THE DEFENDANT: Not in the Court, but in the press.

16 THE COURT: That doesn't seem to me what happened.
17 You didn't destroy anything.

18 THE DEFENDANT: But I have been portrayed that way in 19 a lot of the press. Not me directly, but the diggers in 20 Mongolia improperly excavating specimens.

21 THE COURT: None of that is before me.

22 THE DEFENDANT: Right.

23 A appeal to this Court to accept my sincere apologies
24 for my mistakes. I have learned so much from this experience
25 and hope to move past this and begin to rebuild my business and

E63npros

1 my life.

2 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Prokopi.

3 THE DEFENDANT: That's all.

4 THE COURT: Anything more, Mr. Bell?

5 MR. BELL: Only to note, your Honor, that when we 6 initially began speaking with Mr. Prokopi and determining 7 whether there was some possibility of cooperation, assessing
8 Mr. Prokopi's culpability was initially a challenge for the 9 government as well, and assessing his acceptance of 10 responsibility was similarly a challenge for the government at 11 that point.

12 This is particularly the case because it's not the 13 most intuitive of notions that, particularly given our point of 14 entry to the case, frankly, that one could develop an 15 understanding that there was a requirement for permits in order
16 for dinosaur fossils to leave the country, but not necessarily 17 an understanding that they were stolen.

18 This, however, became surmountable once it became 19 clear that Mr. Prokopi wasn't attempting to dodge 20 responsibility for what happened once the fossils were in 21 England. Once the fossils were in England, he made it clear
22 and was apologetic to us for it that he shouldn't have sent
23 them to the United States because it was clear at that point
24 that these items shouldn't have left Mongolia.

25 Once that understanding was reached, and it happened

E63npros

1 at a relatively early stage, although it did take some work to
2 get this speaking with him and understanding exactly the 3 precise series of events, it became easier to contemplate doing
4 business with Mr. Prokopi, using him as a source of information
5 that could help the federal government better enforce the laws
6 against possesssing what is effectively natural contraband.

7 your Honor, I think he has ably assisted us in doing
8 so and managed to assist us in returning not countless national 9 and natural treasures, but a substantial number of them to the 10 country of Mongolia to boot.

11 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Bell. Is there a
12 forfeiture involved in this case?

13 MR. BELL: Your Honor, there had initially been a 14 forfeiture component of the case when it was pled by 15 information. That said, subsequent to Mr. Prokopi's plea, he 16 also entered into a stipulation in the related civil matter
17 before Judge Castel in which he agreed to forfeiture. So there
18 is no forfeiture matter outstanding here.

19 THE COURT: Any restitution?

20 MR. BELL: No, your Honor. And that is honestly for 21 the same reason.

22 THE COURT: I need a few minutes, and then I will come
23 back and pronounce sentence. I should note that the plea was 24 taken by Judge Ellis on December 27, 2012. And it was accepted
25 by me January 14 and filed.

E63npros

1           I'll be back.

2           (Recess)

3           THE COURT: Sentencing is the hardest part of a
4 judge's job. It is hard because the fate of a person's liberty
5 is in a judge's hands, and except for life itself there is 6 nothing more precious than liberty.

7           So most judges, and I would subscribe to that as well,
8 feel totally inadequate in this aspect of their work. I am
9 given by Congress criteria that I am to use in finding a just 10 sentence. I am told that the nature and circumstances of the 11 offense are to be considered as well as the history and 12 characteristics of the defendant.

13           Mr. Prokopi is an unusual person. He is following a 14 discipline that not very many people follow. The fact that 15 he's following it and helping to create a market for it is 16 important in the study of fossils, and the study of fossils is 17 important in our understanding of life on earth and where we 18 came as men and women. So he's to be commended for that.

19           He's led a blameless life. He's been married. He's 20 raised two children. He's responsible. He's clearly not a bad
21 person, but he's done a bad thing. I don't punish him because 22 I think he is a bad person. I punish him because of the act
23 that he did.

24           So we come to the nature and circumstances of the 25 offense.

E63npros

In society we all live on trust. We don't know completely our neighbor's makeup or what he does or the degree of his honesty. We think we do sometimes, but we don't. But we all depend on openness and honesty. That is particularly important in relationship to the discipline that Mr. Prokopi has engaged in all his life, because he in effect has made a living on the scarcity of history, and in engaging in this reputation he in fact has committed himself to respect the history and the patrimony of countries offering that history.

His offense is serious. Lying on a government document is serious. He's accused and pleaded guilty, to willfully and knowingly, and with intent to defraud the United States, smuggling and clandestinely inducing and attempting to smuggle and clandestinely introduce into the United States merchandise which should have been invoiced and was passed through the Custom House in a false, forged, and fraudulent manner, and with making false and fraudulent invoices as a way of importing merchandise into the United States, and in transporting transmitting and transferring in interstate and foreign commerce merchandise of a certain value, knowing the same to have been stolen, converted, and taken by fraud.

He's pleaded guilty to those allegations, and I've accepted the plea.

So I need to sentence Mr. Prokopi in a way to reflect the seriousness of the offense and to promote respect for the

E63npros

1 law and to provide just punishment. These are deterrable
2 crimes. People who work in this field know what defendants do
3 and what happens to them. A sentence that is appropriate to 4 the offense deters not only the defendant himself, but others
5 who committed the same crime.

6 Therefore, the punishment must deter others and 7 protect the public from further crimes of others and of the 8 defendant, though I think the defendant is not likely to commit
9 additional crimes.

10 There are other criteria that I can omit, and I'm told
11 in all of this to measure out the sentence that is sufficient 12 but not greater than necessary to comply with the purposes that 13 I have just read out.

14 I also have to take into consideration the very 15 substantial help that Mr. Prokopi has given to the government,
16 helping the government to enforce these laws, and in finding
17 and returning to the country of origin various important
18 fossils.

19 So how does a judge take all of this into
20 consideration? I measure this against the range of punishment
21 offered by the guidelines, which are discretionary. I have to 22 consider them, but I'm not bound by them.

23 Given all that I said, I don't think I need to reach
24 30 months, which is the bottom of the guidelines, nor 50
25 percent of that, which is often what I do when there is

E63npros

1 substantial assistance. But I do think there has to be
2 somewhat of a custodial sentence because that deters people. I
3 don't think it needs to be large, but I think there needs to be
4 something. I think six months is the appropriate amount.

5 Mr. Lederman, is there a recommendation where it
6 should be served?

7 MR. LEDERMAN: Your Honor, he currently lives in the 8 state of Virginia. His children are there. So if it would be 9 in that district somewhere where he could surrender.

10 THE COURT: Where do the children live?

11 MR. LEDERMAN: In Virginia.

12 THE COURT: Where in Virginia?

13 MR. LEDERMAN: In Williamsburg, your Honor.

14 THE COURT: How old are the children?

15 MR. LEDERMAN: They are five and six years old.

16 THE COURT: So I recommend that the custody be as 17 close as possible to Williamsburg, Virginia, to promote visits
18 by his wife and children.

19 Following custody --

20 MR. LEDERMAN: Your Honor.

21 THE COURT: Yes.

22 MR. LEDERMAN: I'm sorry to interrupt you. Would it
23 be possible for my client to serve the six months as weekends,
24 given his ties to his family?

25 THE COURT: I think, from my point of view, let me

E63npros

1 first go through it, and I'll come back to it.

2 MR. LEDERMAN: Sorry.

3 THE COURT: There will be a one-year supervised
4 release. The custody and the supervised release will be 5 concurrent on all three charges.

6 I would like to impose a condition of community
7 service at the rate of 25 hours per quarter. Ideally, I would
8 ask Mr. Lederman to explore with probation if the community
9 services could be done for some museum of natural history or 10 having to do with an ability on the part of Mr. Prokopi to put 11 more of his extensive knowledge into the public benefit.

12 MR. LEDERMAN: Yes, your Honor, I will inquire.

13 THE COURT: All of that community service will have to 14 be to the satisfaction of the probation officer who will 15 supervise him.

16 Let me go back to what you recommend. How do you
17 envision it would work out, Mr. Lederman or Mr. Bell?

18 MR. BELL: Your Honor, on Mr. Lederman's suggestion, I
19 have actually had cases recently where that's happened,
20 including a sentence before Judge Furman that, like this one,
21 was both a relatively low term, short-term custodial sentence,
22 and involved a defendant who had significant responsibilities
23 in raising children.

24 As I understand it -- frankly, I could take a moment
25 to look up that case, if it's helpful.

E63npros

1                   THE COURT: It all goes really to the ability of some 2 community facility to adapt to that.

3                   MR. BELL: My understanding is that that can be done
4 fairly easily.

5                   THE COURT: All right. I will do it this way. The 6 six months can be served -- how do you phrase it, Mr. Lederman,
7 on weekends or during the week?

8                   MR. LEDERMAN: Weekends, I believe. I think weekends,
9 your Honor.

10                  MR. BELL: So it would be a period for whatever number 11 of weekends. I believe that the intervening periods in between 12 would count towards Mr. Prokopi's supervised release as well.

13                  THE COURT: What you are really advocating is a 14 community facility.

15                  MR. BELL: Well --

16                  THE COURT: I could fashion it this way: I can split
17 the sentence three months in custody, three months' community
18 confinement, which would give him the ability to have 19 adjustment for his children. Then followed by a year of 20 supervised release. So technically it would be three months'
21 custody, followed by a year and three months of supervised
22 release, the first three months of which would be community
23 confinement.

24                  MR. BELL: It seems to me, your Honor, there is no
25 legal reason why that sentence couldn't be imposed. I will

E63npros

1 leave the argumentation to Mr. Lederman, but I think that is a
2 legally cognizable sentence.

3 THE COURT: You say it is or is not?

4 MR. BELL: It is.

5 THE COURT: Yes. That will solve the problems that we 6 are talking about. I don't know if the Bureau of Prisons will 7 adapt to it.

8 MR. BELL: I suspect that they would, given my own
9 experience.

10 THE COURT: I would be more comfortable this way. So
11 the sentence will be three months in custody followed by a year
12 and three months of supervised release, the first three months
13 of which will be in community confinement. I will recommend in 14 the community confinement -- can I speak off the record with 15 counsel.

16 MR. LEDERMAN: Yes, your Honor.

17 (Discussion off the record at sidebar)

18 THE COURT: It will be three months of custody
19 followed by a year and three months of supervised release on 20 Count One, to the extent that one year of that supervised
21 release will be concurrent on all counts and three months will 22 be only on Count One.

23 I will explain that in a minute, but the first three 24 months will be served in community confinement. The statutory 25 maximum for Counts Two and Three is one year -- it's the

E63npros

1 sentencing guidelines -- one year of supervised release. Count
2 One has three years of supervised release. That's why I've 3 sentenced the three months on Count One and the year concurrent
4 on all counts.

5 There is no restitution.

6 I would like to impose a fine of $10,000, but I
7 understand there is a very straitened financial situation.

8 Can your client come up with $10,000. I can space it
9 out over the year.

10 MR. LEDERMAN: Your Honor, quite frankly, I don't know
11 when at any time in the future my client would have anything
12 remotely approaching that sum. He is bankrupt.

13 THE COURT: And he's in debt?

14 MR. LEDERMAN: And he's in debt in six figures, your 15 Honor.

16 THE COURT: There will be no fine. There is no
17 ability to pay a fine. No fine would be appropriate in this 18 case.

19 There's $300 that is mandatory under the law and to be 20 payable on the filing of the judgment.

21 The conditions for supervised release are as follows.
22 As I said before, the first three months will be in community
23 confinement.

24 Following that for the balance of the time:

25 The defendant shall not commit another federal, state

1 or local crime;

2           The defendant shall not illegally possess a controlled
3 substance;

4           The defendant shall not possess a firearm or 5 destructive device.

6           There is no requirement for drug testing.

7           The defendant shall cooperate in the collection of DNA
8 as directed by the probation officer.

9           The 13 standard conditions are imposed.

10          There is no need for providing access to requested
11 financial information nor limit any credit facilities.

12          The defendant shall submit his person, residence,
13 place of business, etc., as described in the bottom paragraph 14 on page 25 of the PSR. That is imposed.

15          Mr. Lederman, I ask you to go to the probation officer
16 today or tomorrow and work out the conditions of probation.

17          MR. LEDERMAN: Yes, your Honor.

18          THE COURT: The defendant will be supervised by the 19 district of his residence, which I take it is the Eastern 20 District of Virginia.

21          Right?

22          MR. LEDERMAN: Yes, your Honor. I believe so.

23          THE COURT: I have been somewhat confusing and 24 repetitive in stating the order. Is there any ambiguity left
25 in your mind, Mr. Bell? Is it sufficiently clear?

E63npros

1                   MR. BELL: As I understand it, you've sentenced
2 Mr. Prokopi effectively to three months' custody, a year and
3 three months' supervised release, the first of those three 4 months to be served in community confinement, if that's the 5 case.

6                   THE COURT: That's it.

7                   MR. BELL: I think we're set.

8                   THE COURT: Mr. Lederman.

9                   MR. LEDERMAN: Yes, your Honor. That's my 10 understanding.

11                  THE COURT: OK. So ordered.

12                  Are there underlying charges?

13                  MR. BELL: There are not, your Honor.

14                  THE COURT: Do you have an information it supersedes?

15                  MR. BELL: No, your Honor. The information was 16 preceded only by a criminal complaint. There was no
17 indictment.

18                  THE COURT: OK. No counts have to be dismissed.

19                  I advise you, Mr. Prokopi, that under the Constitution 20 you have a right to appeal. You are entitled to a lawyer at 21 every stage of the proceeding. If you can't afford a lawyer, 22 the government will provide a lawyer free of charge.

23 Mr. Lederman, please consult with Mr. Prokopi on his rights to 24 appeal.

25                  MR. LEDERMAN: Yes, your Honor.

E63npros

1                   THE COURT: If he wishes to appeal, I instruct you to 2 do so on a timely basis.

3                   MR. LEDERMAN: Yes, your Honor.

4                   THE COURT: Surrender date?

5                   MR. LEDERMAN: Your Honor, his children go back to 6 school the end of August. So if it's possible, I know it is a
7 lengthy time, but to have a surrender time once they are in 8 school, I would implore the Court to assign that date.

9                   THE COURT: Did you want September?

10                  MR. LEDERMAN: If that's possible, your Honor.

11                  MR. BELL: The government has no objection.

12                  THE COURT: September 9 at 2 o'clock at the facility
13 designated by the Bureau of Prisons.

14                  I think I have covered anything.

15                  Is there anything I've missed.

16                  MR. BELL: Only this, your Honor. It is not something 17 you missed, but something I hadn't raised yet. We had 18 initially submitted our sentencing submission to your Honor's
19 chambers under seal. Having spoken to Mr. Lederman, it is my 20 understanding that there actually really isn't much of a need
21 for that. I would like to, with the Court's permission, go
22 ahead and file our submission on ECF pursuant to the usual
23 procedure.

24                  THE COURT: What I do with the submissions is have 25 them travel with the PSR rather than putting them on ECF. I

E63npros

1 don't put the defendant's materials on ECF, and I shouldn't put 2 the government's as well. If you want me to, I will.

3 MR. BELL: It is not a matter I think of your doing
4 it, your Honor. Mr. Lederman already filed his submission on 5 ECF. Ordinarily we would do the same.

6 THE COURT: File yours as well.

7 MR. LEDERMAN: We redacted ours and provided the Court
8 with an unredacted one, our submission.

9 THE COURT: You can leave it the way it is.

10 MR. LEDERMAN: Thank you.

11 THE COURT: Mr. Bell can put it on ECF.

12 MR. BELL: Thank you, your Honor.

13 THE COURT: Anything else?

14 MR. BELL: No, your Honor.

15 THE COURT: We are in recess.

16 Thank you very much.
